

Node.js is a JavaScript runtime that runs outside the browser.

Express is a web framework commonly used with Node.js.

Middleware is a function that can inspect a request and response during a request cycle.

Middleware can authenticate users, log requests, or handle errors.

A route handler sends a response when a request matches a route.