

React is a JavaScript library for building user interfaces.

A component is a reusable part of a user interface.

State lets a component remember information between renders.

The useState Hook returns the current state and a function to update it.

Calling the state update function causes React to render the component again.